

Just Think!

Books

- Books are store houses of refined knowledge. Millions of years of thinking by countless human brains has gone into producing this fine nectar of knowledge and wisdom called book.
- Some books are meant to be read, some to be chewed, swallowed and digested. Some, to be assimilated, internalized, and practiced in life. A good book is your friend, philosopher and guide. One book can change your life.
- Do not estimate the worth of a book in terms of its looks, size, publisher or year of publications. Some of the best books in the world are very small, cheap, nameless but timeless. Old books are not necessarily out-dated.
- Treat books with respect. Do not take your finger tip to your tongue to turn the pages! There is no worse way of insulting the book, its author and the good God who made them all. Give up this horrible habit or give up books.
- Do not write on books. Make your notes elsewhere. Books are meant for all, not just you.

- Do not fold pages. If you wish to mark a page, use a book mark.
- Do not open the book too wide - the binding may come off. Do not keep the open book upside down, do not put too much weight.
- Do not touch books with wet or dirty hands. If you sweat a lot, keep books inside suitable covers.
- If you borrow a book from someone, it is YOUR responsibility to return the book to the owner. Do not wait for the owner to come and ask you.
- In life, only the knowledge that you have in your finger tips comes to your rescue in times of need. Books in the book shelf do not make you knowledgeable, intelligent or wise. Give priority to reading books, not merely buying, borrowing, photocopying and building up your library.
- For every one hour of reading, you must learn to spend ten hours thinking about it. You understand something only when you carry out independent, original, creative thinking. Do not accept facts and figures as if given by somebody else only to be remembered and re-used. Think like an insider. Rediscover it all yourself. That is the best way to learn.
- If you are not as knowledgeable, intelligent or wise as you wish to be, perhaps it is because you have not yet learnt to respect books. Just think.
