

Just Think!

Money

- Barter System was bad because it was not easy to find the true value of goods and people could be cheated easily. Money, the common denominator, was therefore invented to avoid confusions and cheating. Has money served its purpose? How well? Just think.
- Do you understand the true value of goods you purchase? How much of it is the manufacturing cost, how much goes into overheads, profit, tax or advertisements and promotions? What is the true value of a software? Of services? Of Real Estate?
- Somebody gives you a free email service with 1 GB free space. They get money from advertisements. Companies advertise because they think their sales and hence profit will increase. Who gives money to them? You, of course. Do you understand how much money you give and for what?
- You pay cash to a shop keeper to re-charge your pre-paid mobile phone connection. What about a receipt? What about accounts? What about legal protections?
- Does plastic money simplify your life? How exactly?
- Has not the world has become too complicated? Don't you think there is only more scope for confusions and cheating today than ever before? Can money buy everything for you? Is it truly a common denominator? Just think.
